

Suggested structure to extra writing topic of Unit 9

Greeting	- Good morning Principal, teachers and fellow students,
Introduction	- Today, I would like to share with you my views on the pros and cons of e-homework.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Homework is tiring but it is still essential for us to review what we are taught in class. It also helps teachers to make sure that we can catch up with the lessons. - But have you ever got a sore hand because of the amount of homework? Doing homework online may probably solve this problem. - Can e-homework replace traditional homework? I think it is time for us to look into sides of the issue.
Body	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - can do and submit homework at any place and time - Students can gain access to the online assignment any time when they have network connection. - Doing online homework allows us to better manage our time. - Students can get feedback immediately after submitting the homework. - reduce teachers' workload and pressure - can also do revision based on our weakness - No one can deny that e-homework is much friendlier and more convenient than traditional homework.
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Errors in system can be devastating for our studies. - loss of data in case of server breakdown - We cannot study and do our homework when the Internet malfunctions. - Teachers also need to spend extra time on teaching students how to use the system. - Time is wasted to let students get used to e-homework.
Conclusion	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - it is not all that bad - By doing E-homework, we can complete our assignment on time and receive feedback immediately. - should not completely rely on the system - That's all I want to share with you today. - Thank you for your listening!
