How to Care for a Kitten

Caring for a kitten can be difficult. Many new kitten owners often have no idea what they need to do. Here are some tips on how to take care of a kitten.

(i)

First you need to visit the vet with your kitten regularly. Regular check-ups are important because the vet can keep track of your kitten's health condition. You can also get advice from the vet on how to raise it properly.

(ii)

You should feed your kitten with special milk. You may get this from a pet shop. Remember that the milk we drink is not suitable for kittens. When your kitten is about three months old, it can stop drinking milk.

(iii)

When your kitten is about three to four weeks old, you may start giving it a little kitten food. You may add some water to the food to make it softer first. Before your kitten is six months old, you should feed it at least three times a day. After that, you may feed it twice a day.

(iv)

Do not bathe a kitten until it is six weeks old. Use a comb to remove fleas from its body instead. When your kitten reaches six weeks old, you may start using soap and warm water to clean its body.
