Bob is reading a text about sushi in a magazine. Read it carefully, choose the best answers for Questions 23-27 and complete Question 28.

Sushi

Sushi is absolutely one of the world's favourite foods. Many people believe that sushi was first made by the Japanese. However, it was the Thais who wrapped raw fish with cooked rice. They used this method to store fresh fish.

At first, sushi was made in a different way. In the 2nd century, there were no refrigerators and most foods could not be kept for a long time. The Thais would cut raw fish into pieces and wrap them in cooked rice to keep them fresh. After several months, both the rice and the fish would become sour. People would just eat the sour fish and throw the rice away.

In the 8th century, this method of preparing fish slowly became popular in Japan. The Japanese ate seafood daily because seafood was easy to catch. So, they had to find ways to prevent their food from going bad. More and more Japanese started storing their raw fish in cooked rice. Unlike the Thais, they also began to eat the rice together with the uncooked slices of fish.

Using this method, sushi would need months to prepare. However, in the 17th century, a chef called Matsumoto Yoshiichi developed a new way to make sushi. To create the sour taste in sushi, he added vinegar to the rice. His method created the sushi we know today. People at that time also called Yoshiichi's sushi the 'modern sushi' because it could be prepared quickly.

Nowadays, there are different types of sushi. You can get sushi in rolls, in seaweed cones or with the ingredients on top. There are more choices of toppings too, like oysters, clams and even raw beef. You can also find sushi with deep-fried seafood for people who don't like raw food.

Which kind of sushi do you like best?

To : Bob Lam <blam@goodmail.com>

Date : Wed 3 November 20XX 9 pm

Subject : Will you forgive me?

Dear Bob,

I am sorry for what I did to you at the tuck shop on Monday. I was very sad because I had come last at the speech competition for the first time. When I knew about the result, I couldn't believe it.

After school, I stayed at the tuck shop. I was very disappointed. I practised so hard for the competition every day and our English teacher Ms Cheung had high hopes in me. My mother even came to support me because this was my first competition in Primary 6. I felt like I had let everyone down.

You saw me crying at the tuck shop and asked me what happened. However, I didn't want to talk to anyone because I thought no one would know how low I was. You kept asking me questions and saying that you could help. All I needed was some space to calm myself down. So I told you off and even pushed you away. After you walked away, I blamed myself for what I had done.

You were my first friend at school in Primary 1, and we've been best friends since then. I know I was wrong this time for forgetting how encouraging you are.

I can't imagine losing a good friend like you. Can you write back or give me a call? I look forward to getting your reply.

Yours,
Jeff
