Amy is reading a text about Chinese herbal tea. Read it carefully and choose the best answers for Questions 23-28.

Chinese Herbal Tea

by Kelly Chan

Chinese herbal tea, also known as leung cha in Hong Kong, is a drink made from Chinese medicinal herbs for maintaining good health. These herbs include dried flowers, leaves, seeds and roots. The tea which is made from the herbs usually tastes slightly bitter.

Unlike Western herbal tea, leung cha has medical functions and looks dark in colour. Chinese people believe that eating a lot of crispy, spicy or oily food ‘heats up’ their bodies and causes illnesses. Therefore, they drink Chinese herbal tea to ‘cool down’. So, people call it leung cha in Chinese which means ‘cooling tea’.

To prepare a bowl of Chinese herbal tea, people first choose the specific herbs they need to improve their health. Then, put the herbs in a pot with water. Boil the mixture until it becomes dark and concentrated. The herbs can sometimes be mixed for different purposes.

Leung cha is especially popular in Hong Kong because of the humid weather. People believe drinking leung cha helps prevent illnesses caused by the changing weather. In 2006, leung cha was even selected as one of Hong Kong’s intangible cultural heritage.

You can find leung cha in a herbal tea shop or a Chinese pharmacy. You can also find it in a supermarket since it is packed in bottles or cans. Chinese herbal tea may not look so attractive but it’s good for our health. Many visitors now would love to try it when they come to Hong Kong.

(B-2)

Amy is reading an e-mail from her Korean friend, Sarah. Read it carefully and choose the best answers for Questions 29-35.

To : Amy Chan <amychan@sunnymail.com>
From : Sarah Jong <sarahjong@happymail.com>
Date : 2 Jan 20XX 8:30 pm
Subject: Hello from Korea

Dear Amy,

The Christmas holiday is coming to an end! Did you have a happy Christmas?

I have just received your postcard. On the postcard, there's a bun with a yellow coating on the top and a slice of something yellow in the middle. It looks like it's melting. Is that a pat of butter? I wonder what food this is and would like to try it when I visit Hong Kong again.

My new school term started today. It's chilly here now! This morning, I had to wear a waterproof jacket. I didn't like it because it was too thick. We could also wear knitted hats and gloves to keep ourselves warm.

Today, Mum prepared a dosirak for my lunch. Dosirak is a traditional Korean dish. First we cut all the ingredients, like meat, kimchi and seaweed, into small pieces. We then put them all into a metal box with hot rice and a fried egg. Finally, we shake the box to mix the food together. It's a very nice dish! You should try it when you visit Korea.

This year, I have to go for one more tutorial class after school as I want to improve my Mathematics. I had my first class today and it was challenging. I need to put more effort into studying this subject. I hope I can do well in the coming exam. I now have three tutorial classes every week and most of my classmates are like that too. Do you have these classes after school?

Can you share with me about your school life in Hong Kong? Please write soon!

Love,
Sarah
