

Poem

Elaine is reading a poem about a kind of fruit.

What am I?

I am small.

I look like a rocket head,
Or the flame of a candle.

I am red, but I don't burn.

I am popular.

You can see me in pink milkshakes, on white sundaes,

In supermarkets and at stalls on the streets.

Chocolate and cream are my friends.

People don't like my green hair.

They usually throw it away.

Then they put me in their mouths,

To enjoy my sugary taste.
