WARM MEALS ON COLD DAYS

Michael Chiu

Andy Lo, the owner of Healthy Restaurant in Kowloon City, is kind-hearted. He cares a lot about the community and helps the poor in his neighbourhood.

The restaurant owner, who is currently in his fifties, often sells lunches at low prices to low-income people. 'I want everyone to enjoy the food we serve. We threw away a lot of unsold food before and it was a waste. So I started to think we can do more to help the poor,' he said.

A lunch at Healthy Restaurant costs around $45 but Andy sells it to the needy at $10. He gives out around 200 meal tickets every week so that the needy can buy lunches with the tickets.

▲ Leung, aged 75, is one of the customers with the meal tickets.

'The food is hot and delicious. Each box lunch is big. I usually eat half of it and leave the other half for dinner. Mr Lo is so generous and loving,' said Hong Leung, an old customer.

Andy hopes to continue his way of giving back to society and encourage other restaurant owners to do the same.
