

In-text Grammar

We can use 'Do not / Don't' to tell someone not to do something.

e.g. Don't fight in the classroom! (= Tell students not to fight in the classroom.)

Kate is reading a story about a naughty boy.

Kelvin, Stop!

Mr Brian takes all the 1A students to the Mystery Science Museum today.

Kelvin is looking at a magnet ball. 'Wow! The ball is flying in the air! Is it magic?' Kelvin jumps up and gets the ball.

'Kelvin, stop!' Mr Brian says.

It is too late. Kelvin throws the ball at his friend, Leo. But the ball falls into a tank. There are some model ships inside. The water spills over Leo's shirt and glasses. The floor is all wet. Leo cries loudly. Kelvin is sorry for what he does.

'Kelvin! You naughty boy!' Mr Brian shouts.

'I am sorry, Mr Brian. I know I must listen to you!' Kelvin says in tears.

Mr Brian is angry. But then he pats Kelvin's head gently. He knows Kelvin does the right thing in the end.
