From the Famous Restaurant to the Food Court

Jerry Lau quits his job at a Michelin-starred restaurant and opens his own stall in a food court. How does he develop an interest in cooking?

When Jerry is twelve years old, he loves watching a TV show called The Great Chef—Kids. It is a cooking competition. After watching the show, Jerry wants to cook like the children. At first, he practises the basic cooking skills. Then, he follows some popular recipes in cookbooks. Later, Jerry tries to create his own dishes.

After graduating from secondary school, Jerry works in a middle-sized restaurant. Five years later, he gets the chance to work at a famous Michelin-starred restaurant in a 5-star hotel.

Working with excellent chefs is amazing, but Jerry wants everyone to try his food, not only the rich. So, he opens a stall in a food court and sells his dishes at affordable prices. There are always long queues in front of his stall. You can find special snacks and desserts at his stall. His inspiration for new dishes usually comes from his childhood memory. For example, he uses his childhood favourite food, egg waffles and salted peanuts, to create the best-selling dish of his stall—the ‘Childhood Wonder’!
