Working in the Woods

Tomorrow, I am starting a week of valuable work experience. I will be working in the woods, gaining (1) _____ experience as a forester, even though my parents wanted me to get a placement at a well-known bank. I am always (2) _____ of their opinions, but I don't think I can ever (3) _____ all of their expectations. My older brother, Wing, supported my decision. He knows I'm not the (4) _____ type. I often can't stay (5) _____ during lessons as there are many (6) _____ around me, such as my chatty friends. I also hate sitting at a desk for the whole day, so outdoor work seems like the right fit for me.

As an intern, I will learn to (7) _____ different techniques to preserve the forest. By employing a / an (8) _____ set of planting methods, we can make the forest more resilient to threats like wildfires. Wing said that if I enjoy the placement, I may one day work (9) _____ in the captivating Amazon rainforest or at Serengeti National Park, one of the largest national parks in Africa.

My parents always say that the key to success is the abilities to (10) _____ tasks by urgency and importance and set (11) _____ goals, but I believe that in order to succeed, I need to do something I love. I am looking forward to exploring nature, which is often (12) _____. While venturing into the unknown, I will help to plant trees and care for the health of the forest.
